

KRISTINE MARSHALL

As a parliamentarian, strategic thinker and consensus builder, I will bring 20 years of experience working with boards, effective governance models and leading community engagement to Council.

North Saanich plays a unique role in the Southern Vancouver Island region. Informed by the regional growth strategy and the urban containment boundary, local policies should carefully consider our forests, green spaces, farmland, marine areas and appropriate housing. With global pressures of climate change, local agricultural viability and food sustainability are essential now, and for our shared future.

I believe that community members have a wealth of expertise, experience, and traditional knowledge. Strong, resilient communities are created through collaborative and transparent public engagement by providing residents and our First Nations meaningful opportunities to engage on issues.

North Saanich, “the land where it is good to be”. A councillor’s job is to provide stewardship to ensure this remains so for generations to come.
